Tom Wilson enjoying a climbing day on the Forth Elephant Buttress in Boulder Canyon

Introducing the Council Vice Chair: Tom Wilson

Editor's Note: This month's profile focuses on your new Council Vice Chairperson, Tom Wilson. Tom has been involved with the Club and the teaching schools for over five years.

When did you join the club and what got you interested?

Well, actually like every great story, it starts with meeting a woman. I was working in Nevada at the time trying to keep up a long-distance relationship with someone here in Boulder. She was taking BMS and could not stop raving about it, so I joined the CMC - Sheila told me I was the only Boulder group member living in Nevada at the time. To make a long story short, the relationship didn't work out but I moved back to Boulder in the fall of 1999 in time to take BMS myself. I'd always been interested in the outdoors and the CMC was a great fit for me. I have been active in the club ever since.

What have been the different things you've done with the club, and what have you enjoyed the most?

Gee whiz, I'd have to say I've enjoyed teaching. I've been lucky to have had some of the best and most fun BMS classes in the history of the club. You get to help people do things they never dreamed they could do. Just last night I had a beer with two of my ex-BMS students who were just back from separate climbs in Mexico and Ecuador. The energy is contagious and it's fun.

As the new vice chairperson, what goals

Tragedy on Mt Kilimanjaro

Editor's note: the following is an announcement from Kristy Judd in reaction to the sad news from Mt Kilimanjaro

Friday, 6 January 2006

To all Board members and Denver, Boulder, Pikes Peak and San Juan Councils:

If you haven't heard the news today, I am so sorry to report that we've had a fatality and a few serious injuries on our HAMS trip to Kilimanjaro. Fourteen of our members (three stayed behind due to altitude sickness) left Arrowhead Glacier Camp Wednesday morning at 6:30am. Their goal was Crater Camp at 18,000' by 1pm for lunch and to spend the night. The plan was to summit the next day. While on the route, a huge and unexpected rock slide occurred. Members had to run out of the dangerous path. Unfortunately, Kristian Ferguson was killed. His wife Jodi Coochise was also on the trip. The assistant leader was hit in the head and required stitches; another member broke their femur, but the remaining injuries were minor. All are off the mountain and at the Springsland Hotel. Members on the trip are from the Boulder, Denver, Pikes Peak and San Juan Groups. Please feel free to have them call me.

CMC members provided immediate medical care and worked with porters to get the injured off the mountain and to the Moshi hospital. Some of the members on their way home; others are continuing the trip. One member on the trip wrote this in an e-mail and I'm hoping

CMC Conservation Grants: Become Part of a Tradition

If you have ever wanted to contribute directly to helping conserve or restore lands for recreation, here is your chance. The CMC has been a leading organization for conservation for over 90 years, with a long list of accomplishments, ready to assist individuals who have a project they would like to suggest. Become part of the tradition that helped establish Rocky Mountain National Park, Eldorado Canyon State Park, Dinosaur National Monument, the famous "Blue Line" above Boulder, Indian Peaks Wilderness Area, and James Peak Wilderness Area, among many other projects, large and small.

The deadline for grants is March 1, 2006. The following guidelines have been developed to guide the Conservation and Trails Committee in evaluating applications for these funds. The guidelines are advisory only:

1. Projects generally should include involvement by and/or benefit CMC Boulder Group members. Funds may be given to projects sponsored by other organizations (such as the Fourteeners Initiative) if they benefit CMC Boulder Group members. The extent to which a project benefits CMC Boulder Group members will be a consideration;
2. Trails are a priority for Bob Farley funds; other types of activities are a priority for the conservation fee funds;
3. Eligible expenses include, but are not limited to, construction materials, signs, revegetation supplies, tools, t-shirts, food for volunteer appreciation, advertising costs, mapping equipment, and consulting fees (providing the consultant is a professional and not a CMC member);
4. Projects that have or will receive matching funds are preferred, but a project will not be rejected simply for lack of matching funds;
5. Conservation and preservation are priorities for projects;
6. Projects should be desired by the applicable public land agency from which there should be at least preliminary approval for the project by the time the application is made; and

7. The applicants(s) shall play a role in organizing the project, including coordinating with the applicable public land agency.

Application deadlines are March 1. The Conservation and Trails Committee will make a recommendation to the Council within fourteen days of the application deadline. A written acceptance or rejection will be provided to each applicant. Grant applications will be entertained at other times of the year if there should be special circumstances that would preclude the applicant from applying by the March 1 deadline. For Example; in the situation that an applicant had an opportunity to take advantage of another grant provided they could get a matching grant from CMC in time, or perhaps if the applicant needed funding for a fall restoration project due to a summer fire.

Written applications may be mailed to Beverly Gholson, 3550 Cloverleaf Drive, Boulder, 80304, or via email at bvgholson@aol.com; Beverly can be contacted at 303-449-1101. Applications should provide the name, address, and phone number of the applicants(s), describe how the project falls within the above guidelines, and include a proposed budget and timetable for completion of the project. □

she won't mind that I share it with you. It says so much: "The rest of us have decided to finish the trip, two will return to the mountain, the rest will do the safari. Even though there is a few more weeks for some of us, the rest of the time is bittersweet. I do hope to see some of you soon. ... I have realized life is too short, Mine could have been puffed away very easily yesterday. I will be living life to the fullest and no one should ever complain about the simple things in life when Chris doesn't have life to enjoy anymore...thanks and see you soon".

CMC members are doing a great job supporting these folks from here and I'm sure we'll all have plenty to do once all of them are home. Next steps will include an investigation by the State and Denver S&L Committees and HAMS. We'll offer counseling and care for the members, and a memorial service, if desired. Please let me know if anyone has questions.

A Tale of Two CMC Members

Editors Note:

The following piece, short fiction, is unusual for the Compass. This is the second of a two part series designed to illustrate difficult issues currently facing the club and to help foster understanding between trip leaders and participants. We hope you enjoy them and would welcome any comments or feedback you may have.

The Second Tale

Jeff was frustrated. At 13,000 ft in the South Couloir on Quandary Peak at 11:30 a.m., the trip was coming apart, and he knew it was partly his fault. Jeff had been leading trips and assisting for over two years now, and he had just filled out the paperwork to get approved as a senior instructor for BMS in the fall. The CMC had been a good find for him. He'd moved to Colorado eight years ago to attend CU. His school buddies had said that he had to go to the mountains when in Colorado, and they had gone as often as they could, climbing half the 14ers in four years. Looking back now, he laughed at how inexperienced they were when they started. They'd had no training, and he was pretty sure it had been pure luck that one of them hadn't been killed that one time in the snow on Capital. Now he led groups on both peak and rock climbs and loved to see beginners take to the mountains the way he had. Until today all of his trips had gone really well. Of course he'd heard the older leaders complaining about "problem participants", scheduling problems, and had worked through all those accident scenarios in the leadership seminar. But nothing like that had happened on any of his trips. Well... there was the time he'd caught a student on spaghetti practice unclipping the wrong carabiner from the anchor. And last summer he thought he was going to have to cancel a trip when he had to travel for work, but the scheduler on the committee had found another leader to take the trip. He'd planned this trip nine months before during the standard scheduling cycle but now he was wishing he'd stayed home. They'd met at 5 a.m. to drive to Breckenridge, but one participant had been late and another hadn't shown up at all. No call or anything, and he knew he'd waited too long for them. He was also paying for breaking a cardinal rule of phone screening: He hadn't checked the references for all the participants. One member had been slow, had been having gear trouble, and now he could see his co-leader about 300 feet below them on a rock outcrop patiently working with him. Did they have one of his boots off? The rest of the group had become strung out ahead as they kicked steps up the ever-softening snow and he had just gotten them all back together. They were 1,000 feet below the summit, and he could see that the clouds were closing in. He knew the only thing left to do now was figure out how to tell everyone that they would have to turn back.

Hopefully, a little understanding and courtesy will go a long way.

May the mountains keep you safe.

would you like to accomplish for the club, if any?

I see the club at a crossroads and it's an exciting place to be. In a lot of ways the old glory days of the club are over. We're not the only game in town anymore for climbers and hikers, and our membership numbers are making that very clear. We need to look pretty hard at what we want the club to be and how we can make it happen.

The great news is that I'm starting to see a some huge cultural changes in the club. BMS is a good example. When I joined the club I don't think anyone would have dared to suggest changing the BMS curriculum, but this past year the BMS committee has recruited people from inside and outside the committee for the tremendous task of reviewing every part of the curriculum. It's not that we've been doing anything wrong, but we can do better and we have a lot of people who care. As vice chair I want to help recruit and support the people who will put this kind of effort into the club, and I think the best way to do that's through personal contact.

Do you have any personal goals you're trying to achieve in the outdoor sports the club is involved in?

That's a hard one. I tend to be a generalist - I climb some rock, I do a few peaks, I climb a little ice, and now I'm doing a bunch of skiing. Last summer I thought I wanted to start leading 5.9 rock, but it didn't take long to realize that my real passion is for alpine climbing and I backed off a few grades and climbed in The Park a lot.

Beyond that, I'm hoping to travel more. I don't have any hard goals, but I've got a whole list of things I want to do and a lot of them are outside of Colorado and the US. For me I guess skills like climbing are the means to an end, and that's to be able to go places and do things I never thought were possible. □

Tibet via Mount Everest

Please join intrepid Boulder CMCer's Bob Guthrie and Steve Poulsen as they recount their 'Seven Weeks in Tibet,' the 2005 Spring North Ridge assault of Everest – the same fascinating route Mallory and Irvine tracked back in the early twenties. The culmination of many years of climbing, both Steve and Bob had fantasized at taking a whack at the big E. While Steve has been to Nepal many times, it was a first time trip to the culturally rich and geographically stark and vast where the average elevation is 14,000 feet! From the serene Portola in Lhasa, the heart of this high ancient ocean plateau, through the dramatic mountain lined valleys, down rugged roads to historic old forts, and in to emerging twenty first century cities with yak dung heated internet cafes. Finally on to the North side base camp and the famous East Rongbok monastery at 17,500 feet full of climbers, dreamers, bikers, & trekkers from all parts of the world.

We will share our experiences and slides of our 6 man team made up of 3 Swedes and 3 yanks, one of which became the first Chinese American to summit (along with Magnus our Swede), Neil Jing on contact Cindy Gagnon at gagnonc2@comcast.net.

Basic Rock School Gets a Face Lift

Basic Rock School (BRS) is the rock climbing portion of the old Boulder Mountaineering School (BMS). In August of 2005, the BMS Committee secured a grant from the Eckart Roder Educational Fund (more information at <http://www.cmc.org/roder>) to restructure and update its basic schools. The committee decided to use the money to hire a certified guide to help us review and update our rock climbing curriculum. A large group of instructors and committee members got involved in the process, attending dozens of meetings, sorting through ideas, and finally attending two planning sessions and a training day with Craig Luebben (<http://www.craigluebben.com>). Craig is an AMGA-certified Rock Guide Instructor, author, and gear tester who has worked with the CMC many times in the past. With the help of Craig and all of the volunteers, we can now unveil a modern Basic Rock School this spring containing new knots, belaying and rappelling techniques, self-rescue

Publicity Chairperson Needed

It has become obvious that publicity is the most important function for the Boulder Group to increase community visibility and grow our membership. The Boulder Group's most pressing need right now is someone with experience and vision to chair the Publicity Committee. The position involves setting the general direction of the Group's publicity efforts, coordinating the efforts of several members who are already doing publicity tasks, and attending the Boulder Group Council meetings on the second Monday of each month to report on the committee's doings and relay ideas from the Council to the committee.

This is a great opportunity for the right person who wants to get experience with public relations, marketing, the outdoor sports industry and managing a non-profit organization — as well as have fun with a great outdoor organization! Please contact Tonya Riggs at chair@cmcboulder.org, or call the Clubroom at 303-554-7688.
