Editor's Note

Summer is in full swing, and so is the CMC, with a host of activities for all members. Please see the note from Katie Blackett, our CEO, on page four for her coverage of activities beyond the trip schedule.

Of particular notice to me this past month was the unusual spate of rock climbing accidents. Within the space of a few weeks, there were four separate incidents in Eldorado Canyon, resulting in one fatality, and two other critical injuries. All involved very experienced climbers, or unusual rockfall in a highly active area. There is no systematic explanation for this concentration of accidents, other than the increase in climbing activity as the weather warmed up in June. The accident involving a simul-climbing party was particularly unusual, as this experienced party was attempting an endurance event unprecedented in the canyon: 100 pitches in a day. For those interested, more details can be found at the climbing websites, such as mountain-

Fall Schools Sign-Up Night

Monday, August 16, 7pm

This year's fall schools will include Hiking I, Hiking II, Basic Rock School and GPS Navigation. See www.cmcboulder.org/bms/fallSchedule.html for the course dates. The first opportunity to sign up for classes is at the Fall Schools Sign-Up Night on Monday, August 16, in the BCMA clubroom. Please note that applications will be available online and in the clubroom on August 9, but will not be accepted until the Sign-Up Night. Attending the Sign-Up Night gives you a higher priority of getting into the schools. Applications may still be submitted to the clubroom after August 16. Contact bms@cmcboulder.org if you have questions. Bring your checkbook!

project.com and rockclimbing.com. The real heroes in all this, of course, is the Rocky Mountain Rescue Group, who performed all the rescues, with assistance of Eldorado Park rangers. Other climbers at the scene of the accidents also did what they could to help, which is inspiring to read about.

Nonetheless, climbing remains an overall safe sport, where the subjective danger can be highly controlled. These skills are well taught in our Basic Rock School and Rock Leading School classes. I encourage anyone considering rock climbing as a new sport, or who wants a safety refresher, to check them out each spring and fall.

Chair's Report

Greetings Fellow Club Members:

As you know, CMC's state office is moving ahead with a re-branding of our venerable organization. It is proving to be a trying and controversial project but one which is, in my view, necessitated by, as they say, the facts on the ground. The salient fact is declining membership statewide. It is easy to forget that fact looking at things from a Boulder perspective in view of our group's fairly steady membership over the past several years. But even Boulder's numbers don't look promising. For the past two years, our membership numbers have bounced around 75 percent of the year 2002 benchmark. In absolute numbers, membership in April stood at 1143, at 1131 in May and at 1102 in June. State-wide, the decline is steeper. These are absolute declines in a state whose population continues to grow absolutely.

I bring this up simply because I think it is important that we rally around the big-ger cause which is to build membership and otherwise invigorate the club. It is somewhat disheartening to pore through a barrage of ill-tempered emails from club members elsewhere in the state. These emails roundly criticize the state officials and board for daring to re-think CMC's image and questioning their motives. I am not much one for conspiracy theories. I believe our state colleagues are doing the best they can to make CMC an even stronger, more vibrant organization and to build on the club's strengths which, indeed, are the schools and trips offered by the local groups.

Your Boulder Group Council has been supportive in principle of the re-branding effort and has offered constructive criticism of the various logos and taglines sent along for our review. We recognize the value of building membership if for no other reason than an infusion of new members will help us continue to fill the myriad volunteer roles that CMC depends on. The state has been receptive to our comments and we look forward to the next iteration of re-branding ideas.

On a lighter note, I am happy to announce that we have confirmed an exciting speaker for our Annual Dinner on Nov. 6 at the Avalon Ballroom in Boulder. He is Howard Snyder -- for the mountaineers among us, or for those of us of a certain age, Howard is best known for his participation in the 1967 Wilcox-Mount McKinley Expedition (as Denali was known then). Although Howard and his fellow Coloradoans summited, seven other expedition members perished in the horrific storms engulfing that tempestuous peak. The event has been well-chronicled in books such as Howard's own "In the Hall of the Mountain King" and in James Tabor's more recent "Forever on the Mountain". It was a tragedy that deeply affected the National Park Service and even involved such an august individual as Bradford Washburn.

Although he has given many presentations over the years, this will be Howard's first presentation on the event here in the Boulder Valley. Howard now lives in Alberta, Canada. Howard will also reflect on his days as a Boulder CMC member and trip leader and on his memories of Boulder from the 1960's.

It should be a wonderful evening so please pencil it in your personal calendar (and invite all your friends as well). With the help of Council Member Paul Raab, a publicity push for the event will begin next month (and we may have a related surprise announcement). And, before closing, I would like to thank Paul for securing Mr. Snyder's confirmation as our speaker. It is quite a coup and a testimony to the power of the volunteer spirit embodied in CMC.

Respectfully Submitted,

John Fernandez, Boulder Chair

From the CEO

Outdoor Recreation & Open Space Initiative:

In April, President Obama issued a memo to the Departments of the Interior and Agriculture and the heads of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Council on Environmental Quality. The memo kicked off the President's new outdoor recreation and open space initiative America's Great Outdoors. In the memo, the President stated, "We must look to the private sector and nonprofit organizations, as well as towns, cities, and States, and the people who live and work in them, to identify the places that mean the most to Americans."

To that end, they have set up a website (link to site <http://www.doi.gov/americasgreatoutdoors/>) that is designed to solicit input and ideas from the public on themes such as "reconnecting with the great outdoors", "private land conservation" and "public land conservation". CMC's Conservation Department will be submitting comments as well as working with the outdoor recreation and conservation community to secure a live listening session in the Denver metro area sometime this summer. Stay tuned for another update on this soon.

Appalachian Mountain Club to join in on regional mountain club benefits sharing: The regional mountain clubs met in early May as part of our yearly partnership agreement. Andy Falender, Executive Director of the Appalachian Mountain Club attended the meetings after hearing about the good work the clubs have done together. Andy signed the shared membership benefits agreement, which will allow all CMC members to utilize the membership benefits of the Appalachian Mountain Club members. Check out their website at www.outdoors.org. They have an amazing hut system that I suggest everyone look into for a vacation.

Trip Participant Survey:

As a reminder, once per quarter, the State office will be sending a trip participant survey to a random group of members throughout the state to find out about their experience with the club. The results will be used to help us reach our goal of being the best outdoor recreation organization in the State. The anonymous results will be shared with Group Chairs. I thank many of you who provided feedback on the survey questions.

President's Corner:

In the past few weeks you might have heard or read about the proposed fees for the four fourteeners in South Colony Basin. A few CMC members have inquired about the CMC position on the matter. After a long discussion these past few weeks with the Board's Executive Committee, staff, volunteers and our organizational partners, we've decided that at the current time, it does NOT make sense for the Club to take an official position. Instead in Wednesday's Rucksack, there will be a comprehensive article so that individual CMC members can make an informed decision and if they choose, they can give individual input into the proposed plan.

The Forest Service asking for input is only the first step of a longer process. Since you are in a leadership capacity, if you are asked, please encourage others to be part of the Forest Service process, and ask them to provide thoughtful feedback. As you know, the Forest Service has been a valued partner of the CMC for decades, and thus, we would like to cooperate with their request.

As a reminder, all media inquiries need to go through the CEO, Katie Blackett. The conservation department, acting in support of the work of the CMC organization, may make public representation of CMC on conservation related matters. Individual members are welcome to make statements about their personal perspectives, but should do so as individuals and not representing the organization.

Thank You Hidden Gems Supporters: Sometimes Hidden Gems proponents are referred to as "the silent majority," making it hard to show the public and politicians how many of us actually support the Hidden Gems. Well, last week Gemsters showed up in force, dispelling this myth. Literally hundreds of us turned out to public meetings held by Congressman Jared Polis in Boulder, Edwards and Breckenridge. Thank you! More info at: <http://www.whiteriverwild.org/>

Walking Through the Seasons in the Ponderosa Pine Forest: Summer and Fall — Dianne Andrews

In this class we walk the same trail in summer and fall, exploring some of the stories the forest has to tell—stories that reveal the relationships that shape life in the forest. Summer is a time to observe the fledging of young birds, the antics of small mammals, the flight of butterflies, and the continuing procession of wildflowers. Fall is a time to watch migrant birds heading south, wildlife preparing for winter, and autumnal colors returning to trees and shrubs.

Indoor class: Thursday, July 15, 6:30 to 8:30 pm. Field class: Saturday, July 17, 8 am to 1 pm. Field class: Saturday, September 18, 8 am to 1 pm

Exploring Colorado Hummingbirds — Steve and Debbie Bouricius

Hummingbirds remain one of the least studied of all bird groups, and their complex lifestyle poses continuing challenges to researchers. We will examine the life cycle of hummingbirds and their status in Colorado. We will observe and learn to identify them at private locations where they are attracted in concentrated numbers, and then get a close-up look into the art and science of hummingbird banding research.

Indoor class: Sunday, July 25, 7:30 to 9 am
Field class: Sunday, July 25, 9 am to 2 pm. Tuition: $65 ($55 for BCNA members). Limited to 12 participants.

Discover the hidden world of insects and spiders. The classroom session will focus on the identification features of the major orders of spiders and their kin, grasshoppers, true bugs, beetles, social insects (bees and ants) and others. In the field we will practice our newly learned identification skills, see how insects interact with each other, and observe the roles they play in the local environment and in our daily lives.

Indoor class: Wednesday, August 4, 6:30 to 8:30 pm. Field class: Sunday, August 8, 9 am to noon

This class will cover basic mushroom biology, important mushroom toxins, common Colorado mushrooms, how mushrooms make a living, and how to recognize major mushroom families. We'll also learn how to make the beautiful spore prints that can be vital to identification. In the field, you'll get hands-on experience collecting and identifying mushrooms, and be trained in the lost art of the mushroom hoot.
